Chester Business Man Arrested for Operating a Business with a Revoked Retail License

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

February 4, 2015

CHESTER, S.C. – Daniel Dean Hyslop of Rock Hill, South Carolina, owner of KJ'Z Wings and Ale in Chester, South Carolina, was arrested on Wednesday, February 4, 2015, for operating a business with a revoked retail license.

The South Carolina Department of Revenue revoked the business' retail license on December 11, 2014, for owing more than $38,000 in unpaid business taxes. However, Hyslop continued to operate the business. During the months of December and January, Hyslop was issued three Regulatory Violations by the Department for operating the business without a retail license. Even after receiving the violations, Hyslop continued to operate the business.

"The South Carolina Department of Revenue is committed to holding noncompliant individuals and businesses accountable," said Director Rick Reames. "Doing so helps keep the tax burden as low as possible for everyone."

Hyslop is prohibited from reopening and operating KJ'Z Wings and Ale until the retail license has been reinstated.
